“Collecting Clues About a Child’s Challenging Behaviors”

From the comfort of your own environment, while the children are resting, join Mary Jo for this month’s early childhood mental health conference call. For the first 15 minutes, she will discuss the importance of observations in determining the function of a child’s challenging behaviors. She will provide you with some questions to ask as you seek to find the answers to what the child may be trying to tell you. You can join her for the entire hour or just phone in with a question or concern you have around mental health issues and children.
